We Build the Ladder.

BY J. O. BOLLARD.

Man is not reached at a single bound,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

I cannot climb this ladder in a single day,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

We rise by the things that are in our soul, By what we have mastered of good and of evil;
By the pride and passion and the passion's lust,
And the vanquished will that we have won.

We hope, we aspire, we strive, we pray,
And we think that we mount the air on wings;
We hope, we aspire, we strive, we pray,
And we think that we mount the air on wings.

Wings for the angels, but feet for the men,
We may hope and strive to find the way;
We may hope and strive to find the way,
We may hope and strive to find the way.

But our feet must rise or we fall again, Only to dream is a ladder thrown;
From the weary earth to the airy walls, But the dream is a ladder thrown.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
Nor is the ladder built in a single day;
From the lowly earth to the lofty sky,
And we must to the summit climb by day.

and probably more remunerative. Should I fail in securing the job, I will strike up a partnership—if you're agreeable."

"Nothing would please me better," was the hearty answer. "But here is the job. Suppose I meet you an hour later? If the sporting advertiser doesn't pan out well we can fall back on fishing."

With a warm grasp of hands the two men separated, Drake entering the hotel and Adams walking slowly down the street. But after turning the corner of the building he seemed to change his mind, for he suddenly turned to the left, and passed into the house by another entrance.

When Drake made known his errand he was shown to a large waiting room on the second floor. Several men were lounging about in easy attitudes of ease. One had a marble table, while another had a large lamp. Looking up from the cigar he was lighting he said carelessly:

"Five and one are six. Good number. If the old man would take us all we'd lead him a dance of a life. Ride bicycle?" This last abruptly shot at Drake, who answered in the negative.

"Sorry for your loss," said the man. "I spoke up as a matter of fact. I was a companion to help him out of the way. Gay job for one of us."

"I understand the price of beef goes down at Chicago when he sends in consignments of cattle," said a blond man in the corner.

"Takes a syndicate to buy one of his mines," chimed in another.

At this moment a short, pompous little man entered the room.

"Sorry for your gentleman," he began, "but you're a little out of the way. Said he'd like to see you."

Then the man began to file out of the room he added, "Man by name of Drake to come with me."

Wondering what it meant, and feeling sure he had not mentioned his name, Drake followed the messenger.

A few steps brought them to a hall open door. Near one of the windows opposite a gentleman was sitting. His back was toward them as they entered, and something about the broad shoulders and something about the broad shoulders and something about the broad shoulders.

For his dress was gaudy he could almost have recognized his phidly dressed friend. The idea was preposterous, of course. He smiled at the conceit.

"My western boy," he muttered. "Here the writer slowly rose. 'Adams' in tones of astonishment. 'Scarecrow Adams, if you please,' was the smiling answer. [Waverly Magazine.]

AN ADIRONDACK FISH STORY.

A Gold Watch Found Inside a Pickereel That Had Been Swallowed.

The scene of the following incident was about forty miles from Gloversville, on a beautiful little lake just across the table land at Piscataway in Hamilton county. The lake is not large, in no place being more than a mile wide, while it measures from two to three miles long. The day was all that a fisherman could desire, and every condition was right for good fishing. A party of three were in the boat, namely, L. E. Everest, his friend, Professor Spencer, from Brooklyn, and the writer. They had driven up from Gloversville and were more than delighted with their luck. They had taken nearly fifty pickereels in less than half a day, and the size was good, weighing from 2½ to 6 pounds. The last turn around the "lucky point" was being made before we started for home. Everest, who was trolling one of the lines, said:

"I've got another; he's a good big one from the way he pulls."

Everest let him play at one time nearly 200 feet of line before the fish could be turned. When he had been brought into sight he was not so large as some we had already in the boat, but there was an unusual motion about him. Soon the line was drawn so tightly it was necessary to let him play again. When brought back it was discovered that a larger pickereel had attempted to swallow the one on the hook, which was now quite exhausted.

The big fellow still followed, shark-like, for the dead body of his victim, which, however, we were not disposed to give up. Just as Everest was about to swing the fish on his hook into the boat the professor took up the oar, hoping to strike and thus capture the large one. The movement of the oar attracted the attention of the fish, and in a twinkling he made a pass at it. The blade was about seven inches wide, but his jaws grated across the upper and lower edge, sawing a groove in either side with his sharp teeth.

The professor, by carrying the oar forward with the movement of the fish, at the same time raising it from the water, landed the huge fellow into the boat. He weighed 13½ pounds. The fish on the hook only weighed three pounds, but showed signs of battle, being bitten in several places. Upon opening him we found, as is often the case, a fish of smaller size in his stomach. This one showed signs of life, and was opened. We then discovered a pretty little gold chain and watch, and were surprised that the time agreed with our watches and that it was running.

More than pleased with our fishing expedition, we returned to the Adirondack hotel, and informed Landlord George A. McCoy of our luck, at the same time showing the watch. In less than two minutes all the guests about the house were in the office, and among the number a pretty young lady from Albany, who said the watch was a token of friendship which she had prized very highly. When on the lake in the early part of the day it had fallen into the water, and she supposed was lost. It is needless to say she was overjoyed at its recovery.—Albany Journal.

Only Man Ever Killed by a Meteor. To the writer's certain knowledge there is but one case on record where a human being has been killed by an aerolite or fall of meteoric stone. The fatality mentioned occurred in Whetstone township, Crawford county, O., in 1878, and is recorded in the Bucyrus Journal as follows:

As David Misentliar, the famous stockman, of Whetstone township, was driving his cows to the barn about daylight this morning he was struck by an aerolite and instantly killed. It appears as if the stone had come down from a direction a little west of south, striking the man just under or on the right shoulder, passing obliquely through him from the right shoulder to just above the left hip, burying the greater portion of his body under itself in the soft earth. The stone is about the size of a wooden water bucket, and appears to be composed of pyrites of iron.—Philadelphia Press.

Millions of Fungus Spores. All the energies of the fungus plant seem to be directed to the production of germs for propagating its kind. Their number is often almost incalculable. You have doubtless observed that the common puff ball when mature is filled with fine dust, and this consists entirely of spores corresponding to seeds, which are eventually distributed in the air by the bursting of the puff ball. In a single puff ball more than 10,000,000 of these minute bodies are set at float in the atmosphere they are distributed about over an indefinite space, being so small that it is difficult to conceive of a place from which they could be excluded. Their astonishing fertility and rapidity of growth are among the most remarkable characteristics of this vegetable tribe.—Interview in Washington Star.

An Air Tight Prison. While some men were equipping the trunk of an oak they had just filled they suddenly started back in astonishment on seeing a hideous head about the size of a large pulley's cog increased in size by the air the creature still moved, but it appeared old, thin and decrepit. A careful examination revealed no entrance to its prison house.—London Tit-Bits.

Daughter—Father, I have had an offer of marriage. Parent (who has had an experience with the nobility)—How much does he want?

Don't Like Polleroms.

There is a horse in this town which has a double mission in life. One part of it is to get to fires as rapidly as possible with a ton or two of apparatus behind it; the other is to make as many vacancies as possible in the police force. The animal is a valuable one, well trained and good to look at. For the firemen it has a professional regard, toward citizens in general it goes forth with a place in the public service, but toward policemen it displays the fiercest of antipathies. The horse belongs to one of the companies stationed far down town, and the engine house is rather cramped. People having occasion to enter the place have to pass close to the animal's stall, and as a result the member of the police force who has business in the house is likely to have a lively time of it. To be safe he has to climb around back of a tender and then make his way along with the caution needed to keep him out of range of the horse's hoofs.

If he comes near the animal, it is a bite or a kick, according to the end which is approached. The firemen who are thoroughly acquainted with the peculiarities of the steed have a very reasonable explanation of its aversion to brass buttons. It is that at some time a policeman clucked it, at a time when the excitement of a fire made him forget that perhaps a horse may have a longer memory than a taxpayer and more time to devote to carrying out schemes of revenge. Ever since that day no policeman has been able to approach the horse without having good reason to repent his temerity.—New York Times.

Reply Paid Postal Cards. Reply paid postal cards have been in use in Austria for many years, and would be economical and convenient in domestic as well as in foreign correspondence. They are composed of two unseparated postal cards, folded in the form of a single card, and need no other fastening.

A correspondent can insure a correct answer by writing his full address on the reply fold of the card before mailing it; the card, on its first journey, being folded so as to cover the reply address. The receiver has simply to write his answer on the reply card, tear off the inquiry card and return it.

If one does not care to preserve the inquiry or to write a long answer, the cards need not be separated. In that case a reply perfectly intelligible, unambiguous and binding for all business purposes may be written in one or two words in answer to a direct question.

The words "yes" or "no" or "forty" or "41 Temple Place" or "Boston" or "Smith & Jones" or "6 per cent." or any other short replies, signed with initials or full name, without any heading of place or date, would, in connection with the attached inquiry card, convey as full and definite an answer, and show as plainly when, where and by whom it was written, as an answer on an ordinary card or letter that contain besides place, date and address a summary of the inquiry to which it is a reply.—Youth's Companion.

Women One-More Hates. One of the nearest of conversational tricks is a favorite one with women. A fellow has something real nice and clever to say. He is rounding up nicely to it, when some chit of a woman takes a gasp and says, "Oh, yes! I know what you mean," and, by jingo, says it. Of course she gets all the credit. I do not know a woman like that. She is the kind of woman who says, "Ah, yes!" and then goes off into a poetic illustration of the fact you have announced—something nice and dreamy that she never could have said by herself. I hate that sort of woman, making herself seem so clever and bright and poetic and all that from your brains.

She laughs before you have got your funny story out and says, "Yes, isn't it funny?" It makes it so easy for you to go on, that does. Actually, sometimes she will finish it for you. That is the kind of woman I hate too. She is always coming in with a "Yes, but," and upsetting what you have said, or else hauling out another side of it that you didn't mean to have brought up. I hate women like that. I say let women learn to cook and sew frills, not talk like idiots.—Washington Post.

Street Car Companies Not Responsible. An incident of special interest in connection with the electric street car line of Halle, Germany, is that the German government stepped the running of the electric cars immediately after the opening ceremony, because they interfered with the proper working of the telegrams and telephones. The case came before the law courts and the judges decided in favor of the railroad company, stating that the streets of a city were intended for general traffic, and that their course could not be altered, but that the postal authorities could easily make any necessary deviation in the line of the telegraph and telephone wires so as to place them beyond the influence of the electric lines, which use the rails and earth for the return circuit.—New York Telegram.

Nervous Debility.

Symptoms.—Dizziness, weariness, with nervous, irresolute feeling, irritability, no energy, loss of memory, despondency and low spirits, trembling, caused by slight excitement, sleeplessness, poor appetite, and, frequently, palpitation.

The causes of nervous debility are many: overwork, lack of bodily exercise, insufficient rest and nourishment, absence of amusement, loss of vitality, etc. The results, however, are the same: poor circulation of blood, impaired digestion, deranged nervous system; the heart loses force, the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels fail to perform their functions. This should not be, when a remedy is ever at hand.

Kickapoo Indian Sagwa

as prepared from herbs, roots, barks, flowers, etc., by the Kickapoo Indians, promptly cleanses, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, assists Nature in toning up the entire system, strengthens the kidneys, incites the liver to action, and invigorates the prostrated nerves.

and, when completed, will be a decided ornament to the city.

We could not omit the public baths, of which there are many here of various kinds, such as Turkish, Roman, vapor, hot, tepid, cold, iron, salt, medicated, electric, etc. Some of these have been known and used for eighteen centuries by the Romans and are particularly clean and elegant, and are available at prices ranging from a penny to two shillings, for which latter sum one can enjoy a cabinet bath in the Diana-Fur-do. All the comforts that refinement and luxury can give are afforded in most of these baths. Some entire establishments are used only by women, and others only by men, but in some the sexes are mixed. In some of the cheaper institutions, as the following description by an English writer will show: "The largest and best provided is situated near the bridge, under the Blocksberg; its Saracenic architecture and Turkish inscription, still visible outside near the entrance, sufficiently mark its founders. On opening the door I was met by such a cloud of steam, that I was obliged to stop for a moment, and I was at first at a loss whether to enter. The apartment was also so dark that I could not see a foot before me, and as I knew there must be water near, and that a single step might plunge me in the middle of it my hesitation to advance increased. My conductor, however, better accustomed to the place, led me to a spot where in a few minutes my eyes, becoming accustomed to the gloom, began to discern the various parts of the establishment. I found myself in a vast circular vault or dome, supported by eight massive columns, surrounded by a basin of water so hot that the vapor arising from it filled the whole interior and fell in drops from the ceiling. The dim light, partially admitted through one or two very small windows, was barely able to penetrate this dense atmosphere. It was therefore only by degrees that I discovered in the middle of the basin a crowd of bathers, male and female of the very lowest order, promiscuously intermingled, the former stark naked, except a slight vestment round the loins, the women in not much ampler garb, but particularly covered by their long tresses falling about them." Re-crossing the suspension bridge, we passed through Andrássy street to the Town Park, or lungs of the city, as it is called by an eminent physician. The trees here are of the most beautiful kind, and the foliage is luxuriant. The ground is undulating, the paths winding now under a leafy archway, now along the shore of a lake, and again in to an open spot, radiant with flowers of brightest hues. We were here shown a building erected over an artesian well some 2000 feet deep, said to be the deepest in the world. The sulphur water from this well is conveyed by pipes to various baths and other places of resort. It was not hot but had to wait for it to cool, before drinking.

Near this well is the meadow to which from the tenth to the fourteenth century, the Hungarian Parliament was wont to assemble with only the dome of heaven for a covering.

The zoological gardens are of interest, but are inferior to some of the collections we saw in Asia.

The streets, which are paved, are kept in excellent condition, and as a rule are lined with trees of medium size. The goods in the windows of the shops and stores are arranged in most attractive display, showing a deal of ingenuity and taste.

Thursday, April 7, we started out for a cruise without a dragoon, as the latter had charged us for half a day, yesterday, the price of a guide and of a team for a whole day. The first building at which we stopped was the National Museum, which abounds in interesting antiquities. Since the restoration of the constitution the Hungarian House of Lords meets in one of the halls of this museum. I had the honor of sitting in the President's seat, and rapping the empty chamber to order.

When we asked the attendant to show us Kossuth's picture among the many on the walls, he said: "Not no!" but turned around and pointed to the portrait of a large, noble-looking man whose back was toward the spectator, and who seemed to be talking with a roll of paper in his hand. "Kossuth, Kossuth," cried the attendant. "Thus they muzzle the old giant, whose ninety years have not yet quenched all his fire and enthusiasm of the Cause of Freedom, as he looks each morning towards the sun rising above his country, and realizes that there the sun of Liberty is at above the horizon now, thanks to no small measure to his efforts. How well

I remember when he was in America in 1848, asking for American sympathy and aid for his struggling country. In accordance with the policy of non-interference with foreign nations, as outlined by Washington, Congress refused to interfere, but young America did sympathize with him and his cause, and many a dollar did he carry back across the ocean. A hat was manufactured called the Kossuth hat, which became very popular, and is still worn. Seeing statues of other notables, far inferior in ability and fame, scattered among the gardens and parks of Budapest, I asked again and again for that of Kossuth; but, when I could get an intelligible reply, it was "Not no!" not now. After he dies there may be a statue." Such is toleration. There is a fine statue of Francis Deak, who negotiated and signed the treaty of peace in 1848.

This House of Commons meets in a building opposite the Museum, which was founded in 1892, has seven different departments, all so well filled with carefully selected specimens that larger accommodations are needed. The collection of antiquities and medals contain only those which were found in Hungary or were made abroad for Hungary. The implements of the stone period are counterparts of those found in other European countries. After the stone came an age of copper said to be paralleled only on the Island of Cyprus and to a lesser degree in Ireland.

Among the bronze articles are many curious ornaments such as large spiral brooches and spiral decorations of hatchets and battle axes. The prehistoric collection is said to be one of the richest in Europe, especially in relation to the Iron age and the late Celtic period, as it contains the most important gold, silver and bronze ornaments of St. Anna and others.

When the Romans under Augustus occupied the country on the right bank of the Danube, the native population was composed of Galatians, who ranked in civilization about on a par with the Gauls in France or the Britons in England in the time of Julius Caesar. After the death of Alexander the Great, several tribes of these Galatians over-
